

You can take Orientalia out of the Orient but you can't take the Orient out of Orientalia.

Dr. David Jones

1993. David Jones, recipient of the INAX Design Prize for European Ceramics

David Jones. Deconstructed Tea-Set. 1992

David Jones.
Throne Bowl.
1991

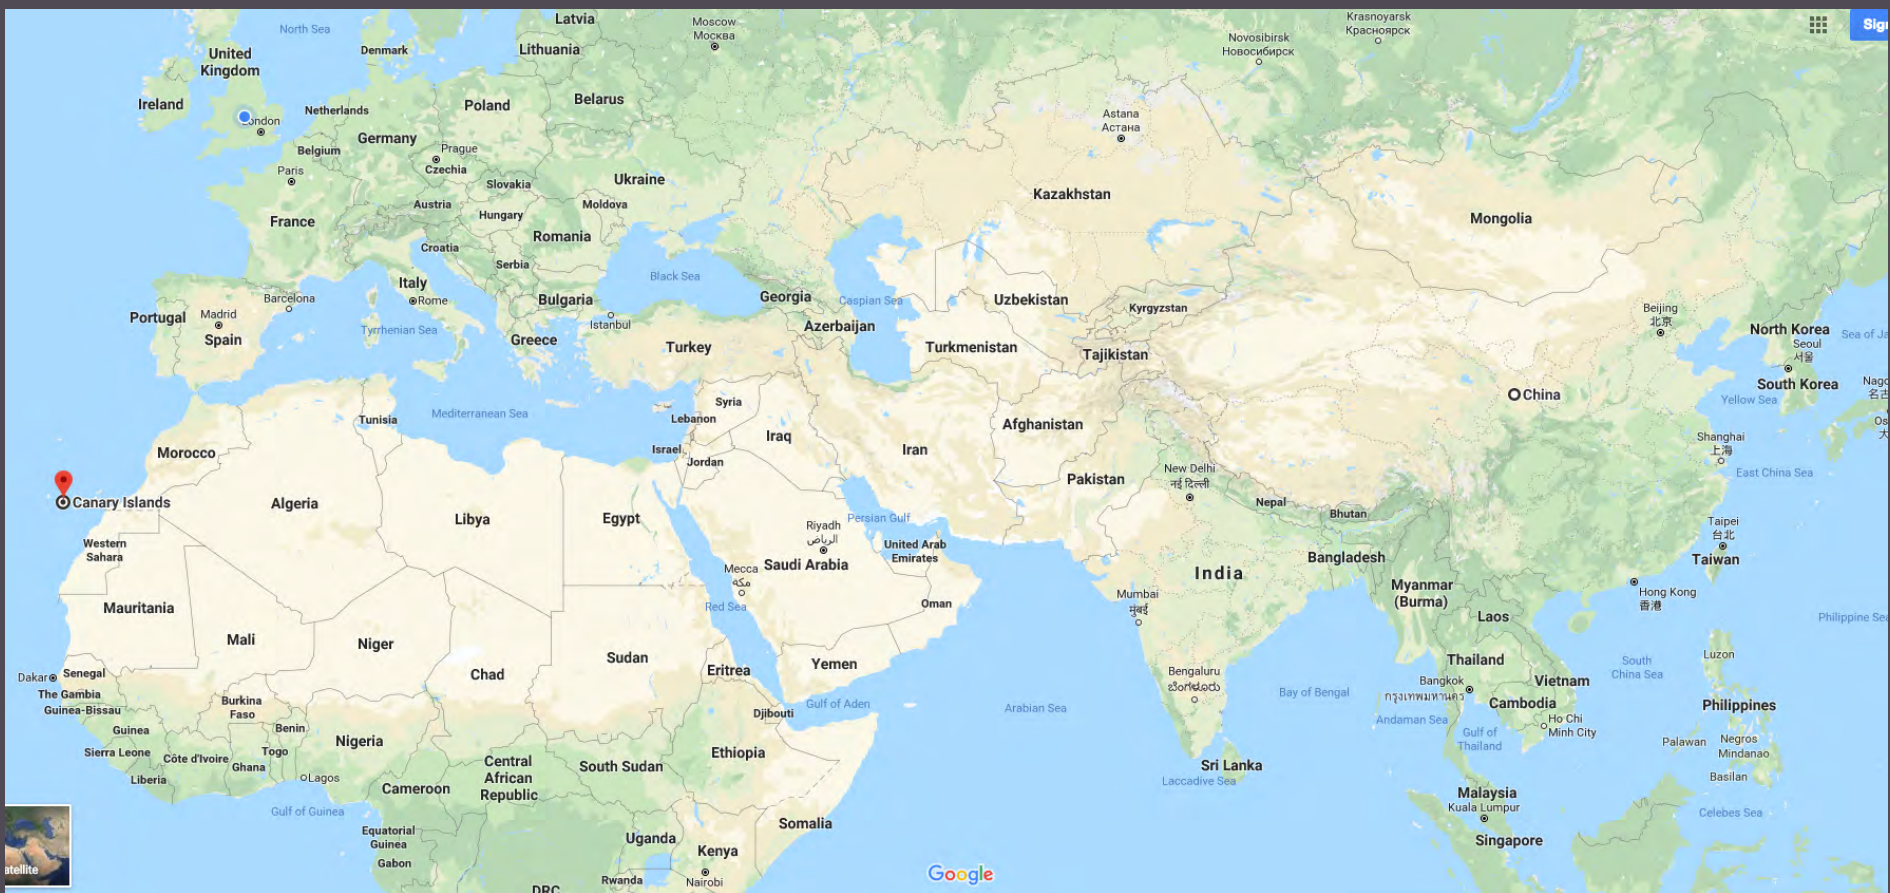

The Warriors of 5-12: Installation, 2007. New International Ceramics Museum, Fuping, China (Photo: Gwen Heeney)

David Jones. Crushed Together. Heritage and Diversity Exhibition, Seoul, Korea, 2017

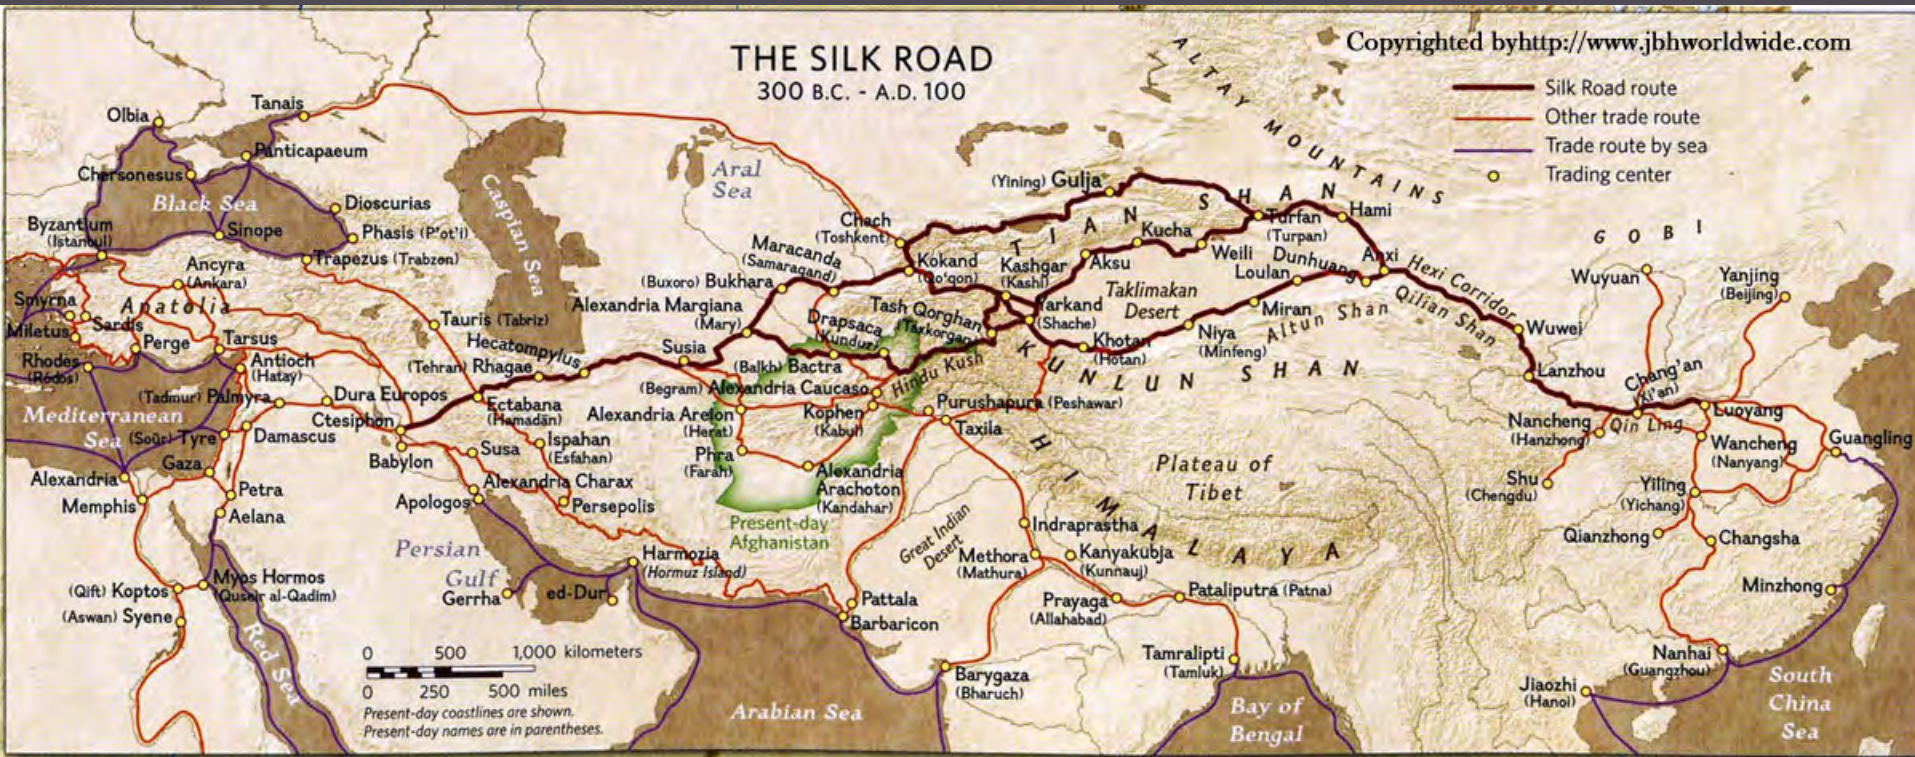

Trade Routes between West and East at the time of the Roman Empire and the Chinese Qin empire

The Canary Islands. The most westerly known point in the European Middle Ages. Their point of zero Longitude.

The new zero longitude, The Greenwich Meridian running through London

Trade Routes between West and East at the time of the Roman Empire and the Chinese Qin empire

Bernard Leach

From "Towards a Standard".
A Potter's Book,
by Bernard Leach

34. Northern Sung, Lung Ch'üan Celadon Bowl. The finely cut and combed surface is filled by the thick olive green glaze.

Song Dynasty. Celadon Bowl

Bernard Leach Bowl. 1980, Tate Gallery, London

Fifteenth century Korean rice bowl appropriated for Japanese Tea Ceremony

From "Towards a Standard".
A Potter's Book,
by Bernard Leach

34. Northern Sung, Lung Ch'üan Celadon Bowl. The finely cut and combed surface is filled by the thick olive green glaze.

Chinese export plate

Wedgwood "Willow-Pattern" Plate

Chinese Plate, created for Portuguese traders

Porcelain Bowl, Chinese, created for Portuguese traders

William de Morgan

Opium Wars 1832-43

Sir Percival David

Song Dynasty, Ru Ware, Percival David Foundation, UK

Lucie Rie bowl

Terracotta army of the Qin emperor, Xian, China

Terracotta warrior. detail

Thank-you

Dr. David Jones

davidjonesraku@lineone.net

www.davidjonesceramics.com

