Ceramic Artist | Cultural Producer | Researcher | IAC Member

Rika Herbst is a South African ceramic artist and cultural producer whose practice integrates contemporary ceramics, heritage preservation, and creative leadership. After a successful career in marketing, she switched to ceramics in 2003, establishing her studio. Her sculptural work is inspired by natural forms, particularly trees, which serve as symbols of cultural memory, interconnectedness, and resilience. She specialises in porcelain and atmospheric and wood-firing techniques that highlight texture, process, and materiality. Rika has work in South African and International collections such as the Corobrick Collection, the Korea Ceramic Foundation, Romania, Slovenia, and others.

Rika is deeply committed to fostering cultural dialogue through clay. Her exploration of wood-firing and atmospheric surfaces is matched by her work as a cultural organiser and advocate.

Rika focuses on documenting and archiving South Africa's ceramic heritage, with a strong emphasis on supporting underrepresented artists and preserving intangible cultural knowledge. She was part of the organizing team of the inaugural South African Clay Awards in 2024 and founded Clay Connect, a platform for professional development, exhibitions, and cultural exchange. Additionally, she produces ClayChat, a YouTube-based video series in which she interviews artists and shares insights into ceramic practice, community, and culture. Through research, video, exhibitions, and advocacy, she is committed to building visibility for African ceramics on the global stage.

Artist Statement - Rika Herbst

I create unique pieces that inspire contemplation and enjoyment by crafting textures that compel touch and provoke memory through playing with light and shadow to enhance the materiality of clay. In my porcelain work, the carving, texturing, and piercing techniques form a cumulative and intensive process—one that demands time and a deep connection with the medium. By weaving a narrative that highlights the interconnectedness of our existence, I seek to explore diverse cultures and the transformation of tradition over time.

Trees, with their entangled branches and roots, serve as powerful metaphors; they are both oxygen-giving and symbolic, resilient organisms that reflect our ability to adapt and regenerate under changing circumstances and are my primary source of inspiration

As life evolves, so does my work. Once created, each piece becomes a path of expression, carrying an essence of life—a quiet but powerful statement of being. Exploring heavier clay bodies through gas and wood firing with natural glazing opens new possibilities, like painting with fire. My focus on larger-scale sculptural works inspired by organic forms is to create sculptures that are distinguished by highly textured surfaces, intricate perforations, and intentional finger marks — marks that speak to the time, patience, and presence of the maker. A slow and labour-intensive creating process, involving precise material handling and atmospheric firing techniques, allows the clay to respond naturally and unpredictably.

The trees I sculpt symbolise interconnectedness and cultural unity. Their intertwining limbs mirror the bonds between diverse communities, making each form not only a physical object but also a vessel for reflection. Through this body of work, I continue to explore themes of resilience, growth, and connection, translating both internal emotion and external structures into textured, living sculpture that invites engagement across time and culture.
