Concept

My experience of ceramic art is centered around the three-dimensional stereoscopic shape, and the topics revolve in their appearance around the concept of the amorphous, meaning that there are elements and combinations that have not taken their final form, and this is of course a logical case from a scientific point of view, while the theories of evolution assume that the forms of life are not a reflection of an environmental and evolutionary reality Sometimes falls under the influence of chance. Therefore, the form is the product of the environmental environment and evolutionary pressure, and in this case the process of assembling the form is open to infinity. And from that came the forms of my work. I have highlighted this concept once in a strange, surreal style with a fairy-tale spirit, and once in an abstract way.
